

Liar Thief Bandit released their third album "Deadlights" on May 14, 2021. The album contains 12 tracks of modern- sounding and forward-thinking Scandinavian garage rock and will be released on digital, vinyl and CD format. Liar Thief Bandit effortlessly blends smooth guitar licks, infectious hooks, and uplifting lyrics with a ton of live rock energy creating an album that easily would pass for a best of collection of singles. Recorded in Tambourine Studios, who launched the career of The Cardigans among others and produced by Erik Sunding who've worked with bands such as Terrible Feelings, Scraps of Tape and Bo Rune Madsen (ex-Mew). The production on "Deadlights" is spotless, taking the spirit of the garage rock revival to a completely new level.

Always thinking ahead, more music was already on its way. Following the release of "Deadlights", one of land's hardest working rock trios fired up the engine and headed to the outskirts of the small Swedish west coast town Strömstad in the summer of 2021 to record once again. Seven tracks were laid down in seven days at Tilt Recording Studios with Max Dahlby at the helm, who's worked with Åskväder, The Drippers and Scumbag Millionaire to name a few.

Six originals and a cover of Graveyard's "Ain't Fit to Live Here" ended up on the mini-album "Diamonds", which takes off where "Deadlights" ends. It follows the same theme and feel as its predecessor but with additional reflections and new views on self-realization. A troubled mind finding keys to push forward surrounded by roaring guitars, pounding drums and fierce vocals. Diamonds was released by The Sign Records on September 16th 2022.